DEMOCRACY AT HOME

It was in a dimly lighted courtroom in one of the post office buildings in San Francisco a year ago that the Tolan hearings for the Bay region were held. On the first day, a parade of selfish individuals—ignorant farmers, big-mouthed politicians and surve representatives of anti-racial groups—presented their reasons on why the Japanese and Japanese-Americans should be removed from the West coast.

The selfish and undemocratic measures they advocated became a reality in the months of April and May. The totalitarian beliefs that they advocated snowballed into huge proportions, played and preyed on the minds of the semi-informed public and resulted in our mass evacuation.

The echoes that rang throughout the halls of the San Francisco post office have not died down yet. They have followed us even to our present habitat through misinformation and propaganda spread by those instilled with a warped concept of constitutional equality.

On Fob. 13, Governor Homer Adkins signed a bill, introduced by State Senator B. Frank Williams, which will prohibit any person of Japanese ancestry from owning land in the state of Arkansas. The reason for the enactment of the law in brief states: Because, on account of the standards of living of the Japanese people, a white person cannot profitably compete with the Japanese either in agriculture or business.

Thoro is much room for argument as to whother the standard of living in California is lower than in Arkansas, and many would say that it was not the willingnoss to have low standards but the ability to persevere and work hard and officiently that have paved the way for the establishment of whatever we had ereated in our former California homes.

In the final analysis, very few if any of the persons of Japanese ancestry have had any intention of staying in the boundaries of this state after the war, so it appears that the legislative representatives of Arkansas should reconsider their decision.

Is it worth going against the fundamental tenets of the US Constitution in order to satisfy the unsubstantiated fears of agricultural competition from fellow Americans who have no intentions of staying in this state?
